Organizational Sketch: Kellough Brothers Dairy was operated by two brothers, William and George. Prior to 1920, it had operated as Crescent Dairy which was run by another brother, James, and Fred Scollie. The dairy operations went through numerous expansions and acquisitions. By 1935, the slogan "A Yellow Wagon on Every Street" was being used, in reference to their fleet of yellow delivery wagons that operation in both Port Arthur and Fort William. The death of brother William in June 1941 came as a blow, however George continued to operate the business under sole proprietorship. In 1950, Kellough Brothers Dairy became Kellough Brothers Dairy Limited when George entered into a partnership with Ray Gleeson and Frank Wilson, both sons in law. The company continued to operate until 1985 when it was purchased by Beatrice Foods. The glass milk bottles used by the operation are now highly collectible.
